Perils of the Matterhorn The Matterhorn is an isolated pyramid which rises to a height of 14,705 feet abve the level of the sea. It is very difficult of ascent, requiring about fourteen hours' time, and entailing any amount of fatigue; and, although rocks have been blasted at the most difficult points, and ropes attached to it, the horribie death of three out of four gentlemen who first made the ascent fills the hearts of most traveliers with horror. Although the boldest climbers of the Alpine Club had frequently attempted to scale its summit, it was not noted 1865 that success was achieved, and up to 1860 even its sides retained the prestige of inviacibility. In this year Prof. Tyndall, with a friend and the guide Bennen, made the accent of a portion of the cone, tu: night coming on they were obliged to descontinue the attempt. In 1862 the same gentleman, with the same guide, reached a more advanced point, now called Pro Typdail. The same year Mr. Edward Whymper, the survivor in the final escent in 1865. spent a night near the summit, amid "toppling crags of ice which a treath draws down in mountains overwhelming." Mr. Whymper has given a vivid description of the moonlight night and breaking day as it appeared from his most perious and g ddy position. The final and successful attempt was made on the 14th of July, 1865, but at a fearful secrifical Two parties started on the same day to reach the summit of the Matterbera. Signore Giardioc, at the head of a party, statted from Breuil, auxious that the Italians should have the honor of first scaling that giddy height. The Eaglish party, which started from Zirmatt, consisted of Lind Francis Dugas, Mr. Whymper, R.v. Mr. Huisen, Mr. Hadow, Michael Crez, a trustworty Chamouoix guide, and the guide Peter Taugwalder, and his two sons as porters. They meanted nearly direct from the east side to a height of 11,000 feet, where they riched their tents for the night. Starting next morning by day light, and crossing the northwest face of the mountain, they were collect to climb a cliff at an angle of over tifty degrees. Surmounting this difficult space over a precipice of 4 000 feet, the party found itself on a small terrace of geotle slope, which land easily to the summit. Mr. Whymper was the first who reached that point. It is said E.J. Miller & Co., i at when the men in the valleys far below saw i e figures of the Eiglish party above them oy ran screaming, thinking they were evil GEO. UHLER, Spirits. The party remained about an nour at the top and then commenced the descent in the following order:

First, the guide Michael Crez, Mr. Hadow, Mr. Hudson, Lord Francis Dauglas, the guide Tangwalder, Mr. Whimper and young Tangwalder, the porter-the other having been left where the party had encomped the eight pre-vious. Mr. Whymper was just ficishing a sketch, which accounts for his being placed behind Taugwalder. Just at a mement when Croz had turned, after placing Hadow's foot on what he supposed to be safe footing, the last named person slipped, overturning Crez and carrying Hudson and Douglas along with him over a frigtful precipies of 4 000 feet, dashing them ioto a horrible abyss three quarters of a mile beneath. Tangwalder hald hem, and the rope broke, saving his owe, Mr. Whymper's and his son's life. Had the rope held, all seven must have fallen together and been hurled over the precipice. Some accounts say the rope was not held tight enough; others, it was not strong enough; and some that it was out by the guide on seeing that he could not save their lives and his own also. Since then the Matterboro has been frequently ascended, and usually without mishap. Two years ago, however, a fatal accident occurred to a young American tourist. Dr William O. Mosely, jr., of Boston.-Philadelphia Telegraph. TURNED IN THE COFFIN. - The following com munication from Aldie, Loudoun county, signel J. S. P., appeared recently in the Leesburg

Mirror:

There is some reason to believe that unauthorized inferences have been sometimes drawn from finding the face of the dead, on being disinterred, to be turned downward. The follow ing is from the Bath (England) Herald, and is worthy of consideration. May not reasons be assigned for this phenomenon, other than the supposed restoration to consciousness of the per-son prematurely buried? He says, having occasion to inspect a grave in one of the Parishes of the city, in which two or three members of a family had been buried some years since, and which lay in very wet ground, he observed that the upper part of the coffia had rotted away, and left the head and bones of the skull exposed to view. On inquiring of the grave digger how it came to pass that he did not observe the usual sockets of the eyes in the skull, he replied, that what I saw was the hind part of the head, (terned the occiput, I believe, by anatomist,) and that the face was turned, as usual, to the earth. Not exactly understanding his phrase, 'as usual,' I inquired if the body had been buried with the face upward, as in the ordinary way; to which he replied, to my astonishment, in the affirmative, adding that in the course of decomposition the face of every individual terms to the earth; and that in the experience of three and twenty years in his situation, he had never known more than one instance to the contrary.
